

I have filed for an Order of Protection.

Now what?

The PETITIONER is you.

The RESPONDENT is the person you filed the OP against.

If your OP number has an "OP" in it, your order was filed in General Sessions court (example: 20OP1234).

If your OP number has an "X" in it, your order was filed in Circuit court (example: 20X1234).

*If you were granted a temporary OP, the Respondent should have no direct or indirect contact with you anymore.
Always keep a signed copy of your OP with you.*

What happens next?

- The Sheriff's Office (DCSO) will attempt to notify the Respondent that an OP has been filed against them. Your OP will not be in effect until the Respondent has been given "notice" or is "served" with the OP.
- "Notice" means the Respondent has been reached by phone and given "notice" of the OP. There is no court date set yet if someone has only been given notice, but you can still file charges if your OP is violated.
- "Service" means the Respondent has been served with a physical copy of the OP from DCSO. This depends on DCSO having good contact information for the Respondent. If you have new or better contact information for the Respondent after you file your OP, (such as a new phone number, a new workplace, a new address, etc.), call DCSO at 615-880-3793 to give them this updated information.
- After the OP has been served, you will be given a court date for the OP hearing. DCSO will contact you by phone to give you the date and time of the hearing. If they cannot reach you by phone, they will send a letter to the address you provided on your OP petition.

How to Stay Safe and Report Violations

- Call 911 if you are in immediate danger, such as if the Respondent comes anywhere near you.
- Call the non-emergency number at 615-862-8600 to report any other contact or violations.
- Save any evidence of the violation or contact (text messages, voicemails, pictures, social media posts, etc.).
- Make a safety plan with the Office of Family Safety (contact information on reverse).
- Sign up for Smart911 to let 911 dispatch know you have an OP at www.smart911.com.
- Give copies of your OP to all important people or places such as your job, school/daycare, family, neighbors, etc.
